

How investing in revenue growth has built LRM's program capacity

We are so grateful for each and every contribution to the Lexington Rescue Mission, and we strive to be faithful stewards of the resources that God has entrusted to us. As such, we are investing in the growth of this ministry to be able to meet more needs in our community. Investing in growth means that we are spending 24% of our revenue to raise more money, 8% on administration, and 68% on programming. Why would we do such a thing? Why not cut our fund-raising expenses to spend more on programs?

Every year, 39% of our donors stop giving. (Our donor attrition rate is much lower than the national average for non-profits, which is 55%). In order to make up for this loss of gift revenue and sustain and grow our current programming, we invest in mailing potential new donors in our community. Bringing new donors into the fold is expensive, costing an average of $10 per donor; however, over the course of the many years they will give to the Mission, each donor will give an average of $651.91. We also invest in reactivating donors whose giving has lapsed by sending them targeted mailings and making phone calls to reengage them in donating. Finally, we work to build relationships with our current donors through our regular mailings, special events, and personal communication, and through these efforts, we have been able to keep our high donor retention rate of 61%.

What are the results? Over the past five years of investing in growth, we have increased our charitable giving revenue by an average of 11.69% annually. By comparison, overall charitable giving in the United States increased by 3.47% annually during the same time period. Even more importantly, we have been able to more than double our spending on programs from $572,946 in 2014 to $1,245,712 in 2018. The chart below shows our program spending over the last five years, as recorded in our annual audit.

As you can see, by investing significantly in fund-raising, we have been able to increase our spending on programs at a much quicker pace than the average non-profit organization. This has made it possible for us to expand the reach of our core services and help thousands more hurting people in our community.

42,006 meals served

44 people lodged for 3,274 nights
in our transitional housing

600 people received clothing

56 people received transportation assistance

1,135 visits to chapel, small groups, pastoral care

2018

45,631 meals served

77 people lodged for 5,566 nights
in our transitional housing

754 people received clothing

79 people received transportation assistance

1,282 visits to chapel, small groups, pastoral care

Beyond increasing number of people served at the Mission, our growing revenue has enabled us to undertake two significant expansions in our services, including a vibrant re-entry ministry. In 2018, 171 men and women graduated from one of our classes while they were incarcerated, 142 met with our case managers after their release (for 800 visits), and 136 completed one of their case plan goals. We have also purchased and renovated a building that opened last year as a community center. It has increased our capacity to train unemployed men and women in job skills and allowed us to place 146 men and women in employment in 2018. It also added 18 new transitional housing beds for men.

We believe it is vital to continue to invest in fund-raising, and, at the same time, to continue to exceed the Better Business Bureau's benchmark of spending 65% of our revenue on programs. In 2013, we were meeting that goal, but when we closed our thrift store in 2014, our program expenses took a hit. It was necessary to close the store as it was losing a significant amount of money, and we could not afford to continue subsidizing its operations with charitable donations. Since then, we have rebuilt, balancing the need to allocate a larger portion of our funds to programming and the need to invest in effective strategies to increase our programming revenue at a much faster rate. Today, we are exceeding the Better Business Bureau's benchmarks for program spending.

We are grateful that our donors value faithful stewardship as we do, and we hope they too will recognize the importance of investing for growth so we can serve more people. This conversation has been at the center of a national discussion about nonprofit overhead, and we encourage donors who want to learn more to read The Overhead Myth and The Nonprofit Starvation Cycle. We also respect our donors' rights for their gifts to be used as they intended, which is why donors may always choose to restrict their gift to a particular purpose. For instance, if a donor wants 100% of their contribution to go toward food, they just need to say it is restricted for that purpose, and we will honor their wishes.

We assure you that we are committed to upholding the highest standards of fiscal transparency and accountability, demonstrated by our accreditation by the Evangelical Council for Financial Accountability (ECFA) and Citygate Network. We were early adopters of GoodGiving.net and earned the Platinum Seal from Guidestar, its highest designation. We were also named a 2018 Top-Rated Nonprofit by Great Nonprofits. Our financial statements are audited annually by R&R CPAs, PSC, and our auditor's report and IRS Form 990 are on our website at www.lexingtonrescue.org. If you have questions about how your gifts are being used or would like to visit the Lexington Rescue Mission so you can see first-hand the direct impact your donations are making, please contact Kim Livesay at (859) 381-9600, ext. 227 or kim@lexingtonrescue.org.
